ABSTRACT. The social, economic and legal sciences system is an integrated system that requires knowing the nature and limits of the relationship between law and economy and whether this relationship is earthy or an equivalent relationship. We note that the idea of research should provide a legal reading of the theory of economic analysis from a legal perspective since the basis of the convergence between economic law is the idea of benefits generally framed by the theory of the contract. Therefore we will divide this research into two demands. The first requirement is the freedom of contract and the impact of public order in contracts. The second demand is the formation of the contract and the stages of economic analysis.
